nuch applause. Mr. Kaighn was the first speaker, naving been selected as chairman of the occasion. His remarks were principally confined to the needs of an enlarged currency, which could be best supplied by the free coinage of silver. Silver was a money metal, and when there was a scarcity of coin, as was the case right now, the way to solve the diffi-culty was by increasing the mintage until the supply was equal to the de-mands of business.

Mr. Kaighn believed the money issur. Kaigin believed the house is-sue the main one. There were several others which are vital to the complete presperity of the people, but until the noney question is correctly solved they will have to remain in the background. H. W. LAWRENCE.

H. W. LAWRENCE.

Henry W. Lawrence took for his theme the matter of values. The contention of the gold monometallists is that intrinsic value should be the governing quality in the coin used, when, as a matter of fact, all values are regulated by law. If not, then why should a piece of silver valued at 60 cents per ounce, be worth $1.25 per ounce after being coined into currency.

Mr. Lawrence advocated an increase

"I do not believe that any political party can afford to take the position that it can get along without any person's vote, where the obtaining of such vote does not involve sacrifice of principle. I believe that we should meet the sliver Republicans and Popullsts with the olive branch, and give them in the division of offices—if they are willing to vote our ticket—just what their numerical strength entities them to. This certainly could not involve the question of a United States senator, as a concession of that office could not be exprected and if concerning failed be. a concession of that office could not be expected, and if co-operation falled be-cause of the unreasonable demands of the silver Republicans it would show the silver Republicans it would show that office, not principle, was their object, and the responsibility would be on them. Five Members of the Twenty-Fourth Return.

ALL WERE WOUNDED

IN THE BLOODY BATTLE ON SAN JUAN HILL.

Corporal Fuller, One of the Heroes, Shot Three Times-All Proud of the Record Made By the Colored Regiment-A Soldier From the Sixteenth Returns.

Five members of the Twenty-fourth Inited States infantry who fought and bled on San Juan hill returned over the Rio Grande Western yesterday noon and are now at Fort Douglas. It was an inspiring scene to see these heroes come off the train and take the couch for the post. All were wounded, some in the But there was a conscious gleam in their eyes that they had done their duty and done it well and that not one of them but would again have taken up their arms in defense of Uncle Sam.

THE RETURNING HEROES. The returned soldiers are Corporal Fuller, company E; Privates Helen and Millier, company C; Private Johnson, company A; Private Simon, company F. It will be noted that they were all members of the companies who stood the hrunt of the battle in that fearful charge on the San Juan fort. Their appearance, too, tells the story more eloquentity than words. No less than three bullets ploughed the body of Corporal Fuller.

His Uniform Worn at Santiago.

One of the leaden missiles struck him a little below the left eye and came out near the ear. Another, bored a hole through his shoulder and still a third shattered the bone in his left arm. He is rapidly recovering, however, and though the scars will be there he will recover his former strength. ALL ENTHUSIASTIC.

"We went to Cuba to fight and we found what we were looking for," said one of them. "I don't think there was a single member of our regiment who hesitated when ordered forward. For a while the boys fell thick and fast, but while the boys fell thick and fast, but that was expected and we made up our mind to die fighting if die we must. I said we made up our mind, but I should have said we had our minds made up all the time for there was thought of nothing clee but to take the hill. When our captains said come on, we followed, and as you know the hill was taken, though none of this crowd got to the crest."

CONDITIONS AT SANTIAGO. CONDITIONS AT SANTIAGO.

Speaking of the condition of affairs around Santiago Corporal Fuller said the colored troops seemed to stand the colored troops seemed to stand the cilmate better than the white boys, and were not so susceptible to the fever epidemic, though it never materialized in a very virulant form. Most of the sickness was due to the water. It rained nearly every afternoon, filling up the trenches with water and thus making it very unhealthy for the troops compelled to lie there in wait for the word to advance.

A PRIVATE FROM THE SIXTEENTH.

Another returned soldier is Thomas J. Breeching, late of company A, Sixteenth United States Infantry. He has been a familiar figure in the city for several days owing to the peculiar canvass suit he wears. Mr. Breeching is attired in the regulation infantry uniform used in Cuba, wears a hat not unlike a sombrero in shape and the whole makes him picturesque among Salt Lakers. He did not come back hecause he was wounded, or sick, but because his term of enlistment expired. wounded, or sick, but because his term of enlistment expired.

Bresching took part in the battle before Santiago, in fact, was one of the number who stormed San Juan block house, being under Captain Noble, one of the five from the Sixteenth who made the charge. About the time of the surrender his time of service expired and he secured his discharge and returned to his home in Salt Lake.

"I am going to take these clothes off," he said, "for they cause me much annoyance. I want it understood that I am a newspaper correspondent myself and don't talk for publication," he added when the reporter asked him to relate some of his experiences.

President Howe devoted much of his address to consideration of the legal problems likely to arise as results of the war with Spain, and other important events in the recent history of the nation. Said he:

"The annexation of Hawaii and the possibility of the acquisition of other islands inhabited by races quite different from our own, will present many problems in law, as well as politics.

On the one hand, we do not wish to abandon the idea of a representative Republican government, devoted to the securing of the rational freedom of the individual who cheerfully obeys its laws because he has made them by himself or his mandatories. On the other hand, we are not quite prepared to believe that the gospel of the town meeting will necessarily be a means of saving grace to the islands of the tropic sea.

"We may hope for the best, but at well for congress to consider a plan of government which has existed in Lousisiana at various periods of its history, sometimes called "the administrative plan." If this were applied to the Hawaiian islands, the president, with a the idvice and consent of the senate, would appoint, say, a governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, auditor, treasurer, attorney general, superintendent of education and such other executive and administrative officers as might be necessary, and the whole body of officers of this kind would, executive and administrative officers as might be necessary, and the whole body of officers of this kind would, executive and administrative officers as might be necessary, and the whole body of officers of the kind would, executive and administrative officers as might be necessary, and the whole body of officers of this kind would, executive and administrative officers as might be necessary. The state of the United States. If such a government were honestly administered, it might be successful. If corruption and abuse crept in, the president of the United States could at any time remove the offenders and appoint honest and capable successors. I merely suggest this in passing as something worthy of discussion."

The speaker then gave a summary of congressional and state legislation for the year, with special notice of the more important laws. President Howe closed with an extended argument in favor of the substitution of international arbitration for war.
